Section 29(a). For purposes of collective bargaining in this Constitution, the term "employees" shall be defined as any two or more persons selling their labor who choose to bargain collectively with the same purchaser of labor. For purposes of collective bargaining in this Constitution, the term "employer" shall be defined as a purchaser of labor rendered by employees.

Section 29(b). The right of employees and employers to collectively bargain shall be absolute. All employees shall be entitled to this absolute right regardless of the manner in which they sell their labor whether public, private, or otherwise. No act or statute shall have authority to restrict, restrain, or otherwise affect or interfere with any collective bargaining agreement, contract, or covenant. No act or statute shall have authority to restrict, restrain, or otherwise affect or interfere with the method, means, or process of deliberation or certification of any collective bargaining agreement, contract, or covenant. No act or statute shall have authority to restrict, restrain, or otherwise affect or interfere with any union security agreement of any collective bargaining agreement, contract, or covenant. No act or statute shall have authority to restrict, restrain, or otherwise affect or interfere with the exercise of said right by any employee or employer in the production of any crop, any livestock, any good, or any service.

Section 29(c). In order to ensure the freedom of speech or effectiveness otherwise of employees' bargaining representative or representative organization, and in the event federal law, regulation, or court order preventing the full collection of dues or other means of compensation, the bargaining representative or organization may condition full collection of dues or other means of compensation directly from the employer within the bargained agreement, contract, or covenant, regardless of public or private nature of the employer.

Section 29(d). The right of employees to strike shall be absolute. In order to preserve the public welfare, the legislature may pass reasonable legislation to ensure continuity of service for electricity, water, and heat.

Section 29(e). Nothing in Sections 29, 29(a), 29(b), 29(c), 29(d), 29(e), and 29(f) of Article I of this Constitution shall be interpreted to conflict with the law or Constitution of the United States or rulings of any United States court of competent jurisdiction over the state of Missouri.

Section 29(f). No section hereunder shall affect the validity or enforcement of any contract in effect or duly ratified at the time of adoption of Sections 29, 29(a), 29(b), 29(c), 29(d), 29(e), and 29(f).
